Eileen Gray (1879-1976)

Eileen Gray was unrecognized for most of her career, but is now regarded as one of the most influential designers of the 20th century.

Born into an aristocratic family from the County Wexford, Ireland, she entered the Slade School of Art in London in 1898. Gray moved to Paris in 1902 where she spent the rest of her life.

Although Gray did not exhibit consistently at the Salons, she ran her own establishment, the Jean Desert Gallery from 1922 until 1930. Her gallery never achieved commercial success, although it was supported by sales of her popular carpets.
